From the first day of the Republic of Uzbekistan's choice of the path of development as an independent state, it performs a number of important tasks aimed at educating the younger generation as a comprehensively developed, intelligent, talented and worthy of the ancestors of the generation. In particular, in recent years, our esteemed President Sh. Mirziyoyev has issued several decrees and resolutions. As for foreign languages, the first President of the Republic of Uzbekistan signed Resolution No. PD 1875 of December 10, 2012 "On measures to further improve the system of learning foreign languages" and the resolution of the Cabinet of Ministers of August 11, 2017. An example of this is Resolution No. 610 "On measures to further improve the quality of teaching a foreign language in educational institutions." Such decisions and decrees impose great tasks on us, teachers, such as educating the younger generation to be fully mature and capable. Currently, one of the main goals of every teacher is to provide quality education to the younger generation in every educational institution, whether it is a higher education institution or a general secondary school. One of the main problems for teachers of educational institutions is to provide quality education to students who, for various reasons, cannot attend classes, as well as to students who attend classes on a regular basis. The next time a student misses an hour or so, the topic will be left blank. It is more difficult for an ordinary student to master the topic than for an ordinary student. The harder it is to master the lesson, the harder it will be to master the topic next time. Given that each topic or lesson is interconnected, it will be difficult for a student who does not attend classes for an hour to master the next topic. This is just an analysis of a student who missed an hour of class. Imagine what would happen if a student did not come to class for several days or weeks. With this in mind, every teacher should pay special attention not only to students who regularly attend classes, but also to students who for some reason cannot attend classes. In solving this problem, if we send the main content of the lesson and the most important information electronically to the student or his parents via various social networks, for example, by telegram or email, the main content of the lesson will not be understood by an ordinary student. , assimilates the most important information, and the next time you come to class, it will be much easier for you to understand a new topic. If the student is given several more tests and assignments on the topic, in addition to the main content and the most important information, it will be easier for the student to consolidate the topic. This method does not take up much of the teacher's time. In addition, this method strengthens the relationship between the teacher and the parent, the parent spends time with the child, and the emotional solidarity between them increases. In addition, the following methods can be used to learn foreign languages more efficiently and quickly. 1. Encourage discussion. Invite your students to discuss various topics: popular imaginary characters in a TV show, "if..." about their dreams of the future. Discussion is more effective. Going beyond the established curriculum gives students more freedom to express their opinions, and the discussion ends. leads to language competition. This method is especially useful for high school students. Pin the new theme using this method, which would be appropriate to use. 2. Search and find. Search the internet for a list of the best apps and games that you can use to teach English. This makes it easier for students to learn the lesson and memorize new words. Share them with your students as they replenish their vocabulary, master interactive learning platforms and improve their grammar through constant practice. If every teacher perceives his students as his own children, I am sure that in the future these students will achieve great success and become worthy children for the development of our country. 3. The game "Words in pictures". This game is a good visual aid for practicing grammatical forms. There are several pictures on the cards depicting a person's actions, such as skating, playing chess and reading a book. The teacher shows cards with pictures (the child is skating) and asks: what is he doing? Students find a similar picture and answer: He is skating. In conclusion, it should be noted that when teaching English, taking into account the age and psychological characteristics of students, their interest in learning a foreign language, the development of modern didactic developments based on pedagogical technologies that help fully meet the needs, and the development of a reliable mechanism for their implementation will provide a practical effect. the solution to the problem. Anyone who is serious about mastering a foreign language can do it on their own. However, in order to do this, a person must be psychologically prepared to master the language. Learning a foreign language requires only a little perseverance, firm determination and a well-organized daily routine. Most language learners today are between the ages of 17 and 35. A foreign language can be studied both individually and with the help of a teacher. And in order to do this, you need to take the following steps: 1. Practice the language daily, if at all possible. The training time in this scenario is set by the system in the same way as in sports training. 2. Scheduling classes. You can take a break, listen to music or go for a walk after completing a short lesson. 3. A beautiful phrase. Individual words should never be memorized; only combined words should be memorized, and studying in context gives the best results. 4. Keep a diary on the side. An attempt to use common words written in a notebook in communication is also useful. 5. Commitment to memory. An attempt to translate words, dialogues and lyrics in a fantastically promotional manner. 6. Memorization is a useful activity. The words must be accurately memorized and checked by teachers. 7. Make a list of phrases that you want to remember. It is very important to write down phrases and proverbs and memorize them as soon as possible. 8. Not to be limited by theory. Practical exercises should also be taken into account. Watch movies, read a variety of literature and newspapers, and chat online with English-speaking friends. 9. The habit of correcting mistakes. Nothing should ever go unchecked, and nothing should ever go unchecked. 10. Self-confidence. No matter what, you should not stop learning the language. The language content should be relevant to the readers' lives and diaries; on the other hand, the actions or tasks that inspire them to communicate should be interesting and meaningful to them. During the lesson, students become aware of themselves as participants in the lesson, and throughout the lesson they behave as if they are the heroes of the work, trying to do this. If the reader wants to learn a foreign language on his own, he should: 1. To start, choose a suitable textbook. This is very important for students who study without the help of a teacher: the textbook helps the student to generalize knowledge and correctly "perform" them. 2. Memorizing words It is not difficult to learn English quickly: they remember not only one word, but also all sentences related to the subject they are interested in. 3. Repeat the thematic texts several times. This strategy will help the reader to remember frequently used phrases, as well as to learn the necessary vocabulary. 4. Summarize what the reader has learned. In order to avoid too quickly "swallowing" one layer of English, it is vital to first spend time thinking about the material studied; otherwise it will quickly disappear from the reader's memory. 5. Immerse yourself in the language environment. It is very important to try to create a proper language environment to learn English faster. The reader can improve their understanding of English by listening to audio content such as podcasts. If we summarize this briefly, then the reader will most likely achieve the desired goal of the head of the language learning department by following the above tips and actions.
